

I want to submit that I have numerous occasions in which I have been bumped from a flight. On occasion this has made me late for a meeting, connection, or planned event. It is senseless to allow airlines to double book a seat. If I pay for the seat it is mine. In any other business this double booking would be fraud. If the airline is making money from this, it is morally and ethically wrong.